Introduction:

- The Reusable Learning Object (RLO) is a small chunk of eLearning resource which aims to deliver a learning objective using multimedia and in an interactive manner.
- Seven RLOs have been co-created with students and for students in the Faculty of Medicine, University of Malaya, guided by the founder of RLOs (University of Nottingham UK).
- The RLOs will be integrated in teaching and released for students to use.

Purpose:

- This study aims to evaluate the effectiveness of Reusable Learning Objects (RLOs) in improving students' knowledge in the related healthcare curricula as well as their reaction on the RLO.

Study Procedure:

- You will be required to answer a questionnaire before and immediately after using the RLO.
- You may use the RLO as long as you wish.
- You will be contacted in 2 months to find out more about the knowledge you have gained from this RLO.

Confidentiality:

- Your answer and information will be kept confidential by the investigators and will not be made public unless disclosure is required by law.
- Your input will not be used for the evaluation of your study performance but only for the analysis of this study.

Participation in the Study:

- Participation in this research is entirely voluntary.
- Whether or not you decide to participate, your decision will not disadvantage you in any way.
- Only people who give their informed consent will be included in the project.
- If you give informed consent to participate, you may still withdraw from the project at any time without giving a reason. You also have the option of withdrawing any data that may identify you.

Benefit to participants:

- You will be able to use additional interactive learning materials for your study by participating in this study.

Risk to participants:

- You might feel burdened due to increasing study workload.
- However, each RLO is designed to have interactive function and only last about 10-15 minutes.
- You can refrain from using the RLOs and only read the original printed learning materials given by your lecturers.
- Participation in this research is entirely voluntary; you may withdraw your participation and any identifiable data at any time, without prejudice.

If you have any question about this study or your rights, please contact the investigators listed above.
